Williams' successor named

TRENTON, N.J. — Republican financier Nicholas F. Brady was appointed to the U.S. Senate on Monday to serve the seven months remaining in the term of Democrat Harrison M. Williams Jr., who resigned because of Abscam.

Following the announcement by Gov. Thomas H. Kean, Brady, 52, immediately ruled out any possibility he would be a candidate in the November election for a full six-year term.

Brady, an adviser and contributor to Kean's campaign last year, will be the 54th Republican in the Senate. This extra GOP vote could be crucial on many issues, including President Reagan's controversial fiscal 1983 budget.

Kean's appointment does not need confirmation by any other body.

Explorers plant flag at pole

LONDON — British explorers Sir Randolph

Fiennes and Charles Burton planted the Union Jack at the top of the World Sunday, the first men ever to cross both poles in a single voyage around the Earth.

The crossing to the North Pole from the Canadian coast was the shortest on record, 46 days, and was completed four days ahead of schedule, a spokesman for the Transglobe expedition said.

Reagan to propose credits

WASHINGTON — President Reagan will propose a program of tuition tax credits this week for parents of children in private and parochial elementary and secondary schools, administration sources said Monday.

The program will be phased in over three years, probably beginning in 1983, with a maximum credit ultimately of about $500, sources said. The size of the credit would depend on a family's income, and the program would be structured to focus benefits on middle- and lower-income families, the sources said.

About 5 million children attend private schools, 34 million of them in Roman Catholic schools.

Coverage of Reagan, Poland get Pulitzers

NEW YORK (AP) — The Associated Press and The New York Times each won two 1982 Pulitzer Prizes on Monday. The Kansas City Star and the Kansas City Times won the Pulitzer for general local reporting and a Times staffer was cited for national reporting.

The gold medal for public service went to the Detroit News for a national investigation that produced five dozen stories on a "pattern of deception and unresponsiveness" in the way the U.S. Navy reported shipboard deaths of sailors to their families.

The 60th annual Pulitzer Prizes, most of which carry $1,000 cash awards, were announced by Michael I. Sovern, president of Columbia University, which administers the competition.

AP's Saul Pett received the feature writing prize for his encompassing portrait of American government, and Ron Edmonds of the AP was honored in spot news photography for his series of pictures of President Reagan as he was hit by a would-be assassin's bullet.

John Darnton's dispatches to The New York Times from Poland won the international reporting prize and the Times' Jack Rosenthal was cited for editorial writing.

The staffs of the two Kansas City newspapers won the general local reporting prize for their coverage of the Hyatt Hotel disaster and its causes.

The two papers produced more than 340 stories and hundreds of pictures in tracing what went wrong with the skywalks of the hotel that collapsed and killed 114 people last July 17.

Class gift for gardens; Food for Poland ousted

BY MARK WIEST

Senior Reporter

Redeveloping the Botanical Gardens emerged as the new 1982 class gift after the ASBYU Supreme Court found the placement of the Food for Poland proposal on student ballots in violation of ASBYU bylaws.

"Because of last week's court order, the Botanical Garden redevelopment will be the new class gift," said Kasey Haws, ASBYU president. "But in addition, Food for Poland won the election by a 5 percent margin."

Haws said the child-care center proposal and the security system in the Harris Fine Arts Center did not receive as many votes as Food for Poland and the Botanical Garden.

The ASBYU Supreme Court eliminated the Food for Poland proposal because of a bylaw governing the placement of class-gift selections on ballots was violated.

Not followed

"First the proper procedure for placing a class gift on the ballot was not followed," said Chief Justice James Van Leishout. "Second, the constitution was violated by placing a fourth class-gift proposal on the ballot."

"BYU students have the right to know that Food for Poland followed every instruction and met every deadline given them by ASBYU officers," said Mitch Davis, president of Student Ambassadors for Poland. "We went by the book they gave us."

Haws said he had no choice but to support the court's decision.

"I felt responsible for the inequities that came up," said Haws. "I will do my best to make up for the Food for Poland proposal and restore the inequity."

Proper channels

According to Van Leishout, Haws put the proposal on the ballot without following the proper channels.

"I thought what I was doing was to the students' best advantage," said Haws.

Leader wants union to endorse candidate

WASHINGTON (AP) — AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland wants the labor federation to unite behind a candidate for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination well in advance of state primaries and caucuses, a move he hopes would enhance labor's influence in the party.

But many politicians and union officials said Monday they thought Kirkland's plan would be difficult to implement and could backfire on organized labor. All of the people who talked about the plan did so only when assured they would not be identified.

"I wonder if it's possible so early in the process to have that sort of consensus develop," said one labor official.

A politician said such an early endorsement could "have a way of diminishing labor's influence down the road." He added that the labor federation could "wake up six or 12 months later and find its person not doing so well" in the state caucuses and primaries.

A labor supporter of the plan was quoted as saying "labor can't sit on the sidelines and then jump in later."

Higher ticket fees to be considered by Provo council

In an effort to control parking problems in downtown Provo, the City Municipal Council is working on an ordinance that would authorize police to tow away vehicles of continuing offenders.

According to the council agenda, the ordinance may "prohibit the overtime parking for more than two, three and four times the allowed maximum time," by increasing the cost of each penalty or towing away vehicles after three unsatisfied citations.

The council will vote on the issue in tonight's meeting, said Keith Roes, council chairman.

To set the stage for the new ordinance, a Provo downtown parking policy statement was unanimously approved March 30. The statement was issued as a development plan for future parking and provided for revisions of a 1964 parking policy.

Dorms revamp image, seek older residents

If a student is serious about his studies, then on-campus housing is the place to live, according to Lamon Oviatt, assistant director of housing.

This is the new image on-campus housing will be presenting the coming year.

"On-campus housing is an ideal place for a student," he said. Students who live in the dorms seem to have a higher GPA," said Oviatt.

On-campus housing will also be trying to retain its present occupants, Oviatt said. The dorms are mostly occupied by freshmen, but the housing office will try to attract upperclassmen and graduate students.

Something new in on-campus housing is quiet floors and honors floors, Oviatt said. On the quiet floors, there is silence 24 hours a day. Students living on these floors have a higher GPA than other students, Oviatt said.

Y student 1st in all-state Japanese speech battle

Several students from BYU participated and placed in the Second Annual All-Utah Japanese Speech Contest at BYU on Saturday.

The contest involved finalists from several universities in Utah. BYU's only first-place winner was Paul Warnick, a sophomore from Salt Lake City majoring in computer science, said Masakazu Watabe, an assistant professor of Japanese. He was first in the advanced division.

Beginning division

In the beginning division, Clint Jordan, a freshman from Seattle majoring in business management, and Sheila Nekota, a freshman from Honolulu majoring in pre-law, placed third, he said.

Advanced division

In the advanced division, John Bentley, a freshman from Denver majoring in microbiology, also placed third, Watabe said.

The winner of the kanji bee was Ronald Arthur, a senior from Orem majoring in Japanese.

Watabe said prizes were $50 for first place, $30 for second place and $10 for third place.

Paul Warnick, a sophomore from Salt Lake City majoring in computer science, and Kiyono DeGuzman from the University of Utah show off Japanese-English dictionaries won in a Japanese speech contest Saturday. Warnick placed first in the advanced division.

Tests 'prove' Christ authored D&C

By SHIRLEY BOWEN

Staff Writer

Christ is the author of the Doctrine and Covenants, according to computer word counts reported by Robert L. Hanson of Solano Beach, Calif.

Hanson reports his research in a privately published book titled, "The Signature of God: A Positive Identification of Christ and Prophets by Computer Wordprints."

Hanson began his research in a red-letter edition of the New Testament. Here he claimed to have discovered the word patterns of the verses in red print, attributed to Christ, were different from the narration in black print. A total of 10,285 words of Christ were taken in five samples from the books of Matthew, Mark, Luke, John and Revelation.

"Our question was, did these five samples represent one coherent author, or did we have five authors scattered all over the word frequency spectrum? By actual measurement, the Savior had a wordprint as individual as that of Shakespeare," Hanson said.

This ancient wordprint of Christ was then compared with alleged revelations of five modern sacred writers: Mary Baker Eddy, Ellen G. White, Joseph Smith, David R. Mason, and a ghost writer hired to forge a revelation, Hanson said.

"Only one matched the ancient pattern of Christ. It does not take much data to see that Christ is alien to 19th-century writers and that Joseph's revelations are from Christ," Hanson said.

Word frequency analysis is objective and unbiased, he said. "The computer does not get upset when the real world is found to be different from sectarian notions. As sample after sample failed to match Christ, it was more than just a refreshing change when one candidate prophet brought forth revelations bearing the word frequency signature of God," Hanson said.

"Good word frequency analysis is not biased by doctrine or subject matter carried by contextual words such as baptism, faith, Christ and Mormon. These key words may be easy to forge and in fact do not work well in computer tests," he said.

Dr. Alvin C. Rencher, chairman of the BYU statistics department, and Dr. Wayne A. Larsen, a BYU professor of statistics, said, though not detracting from Hanson's breakthrough, that more tests could be conducted, and his optimism could be a little premature.

"We do object to phraseology and his statement that the computer 'proved' God," his language lacks the usual scientific caution," they said.

Child's epilepsy may be outgrown

BOSTON (AP)—Researchers who followed victims of childhood epilepsy through their 20s conclude that most outgrow this illness and stop having seizures by the time they reach adulthood.

Although some youngsters have specific problems that make them susceptible to epilepsy later in life, the study found that most "have an excellent chance of remaining seizure free after the withdrawal of anti-convulsant drugs."

The National Institute of Neurological and Communicative Disorders and Stroke estimates epilepsy strikes 75 of every 100,000 children under age 1. The annual incidence remains close to this level until age 10. Among adults, epilepsy afflicts about 46 of every 100,000 people yearly.

The study kept track of 148 young epilepsy victims for 15 to 23 years, the longest such followup ever conducted. Only 41, or 28 percent, had new seizures after they stopped taking epilepsy medicine. Nearly all the relapses occurred within five years after medication ended.

"The fact that overall, the relapse rate is low compared to what is generally accepted for adults is most encouraging," Dr. Jean Holowach Thurston, who directed the study, said in an interview.

The study was conducted at Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis, Mo., and published in Thursday's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

Writing piracy problem at Y

Plagiarism is more common at BYU than the buying of research papers that plagues other universities, say BYU officials.

Although some companies have advertised custom-made research papers on any subject through catalogs, buying research papers is not a big problem at BYU.

Michael Whitaker, chairman of University Standards, said he has seen more problems with plagiarism this year than in other years. Four cases have been reported between September 1981 and March 1982.

"I'm sure we have a lot more plagiarism than what we have handled," he said.

David Sorenson, dean of Student Life, said most cases are handled on a professor-student basis.

Donation to permit production

Students in a multi-image production course will present two nine-projector slide productions Friday at 7 p.m. in A-170 JKBA.

Equipment donated earlier this year made it possible for the students to use up to 15 projectors, according to course instructor Jim Walker. The computerized equipment also has the capability to control the house lights and sound system.

Doug Murray, a senior from Detroit, Mich., majoring in photography, said because of the course and donated equipment, BYU will soon organize the first student chapter of the Association for Multi-Image International, a professional organization involved in electronic visual communications.

Walker said similar equipment used in Australia allows professionals to use up to 128 slide projectors controlled from a keyboard.

Cougars fall to UCLA, Washington at playoffs

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — Whatever the reason, the Cougars did go wrong for the second time in the Pacific Northwest Conference Playoffs. They were bombed 21-3 by UCLA on Friday and 13-0 by Western Washington on Saturday. The Cougars were a critical factor in the Cougars' success throughout the season, and injuries to their key players during the playoffs kept them out of a 3-0 lead during the first half of play, but gave up a touchdown and penalty kick to trail 12-3 at the end of the first half. The Cougars never looked back as they won the second half to pulverize the Bruins for a final score of 21-3.

eight of the Cats' starting 15 players, and the power of Washington was too much for the BYU second-team players. The Cougars, who were shut out 13-0 by Western Washington, dropped their season-long, third-place national ranking to finish in the top 16 teams in the United States. "If anything could have gone wrong, it did against both of these teams," remarked BYU coach John Seggar during a telephone interview from Santa Barbara. "We had several players out with stitches and hyperextended knees after the UCLA game, and we didn't have the punch to push the ball into the end zone," Seggar said. The Cougars ended their 1981-82 season with a 10-4 record, one of their poorest win-loss showings in several years. Because of the injuries to his starting players, Seggar said, the BYU match against Utah State, which was scheduled for Wednesday evening, has been postponed until the 1982 fall semester.

Football player shot

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Jesse Phillips Jr., a former running back with four professional football teams, was shot as he tried to rob a jewelry store, police said Sunday. Police Lt. Marv Pennington said Phillips, 35, was listed in fair but stable condition at St. Mary's Hospital, suffering from two shotgun pellet wounds in his right arm and one in the foot.

The 6-foot, 208-pound Phillips was a graduate of Michigan State University and was selected by the Cincinnati Bengals as a fourth-round draft choice in 1968. In 1970 he was named to The Sporting News AFC All-Star Team. He was traded from the Bengals to the New Orleans Saints for two draft choices in September 1973, and stayed in New Orleans for two years until he was traded to the Oakland Raiders in July 1975 for one draft choice.

4 recruits give Y nod

On Wednesday, April 14, BYU will officially sign several new athletes to its basketball squad. However, the actual recruiting process has been going on for much longer than just a few weeks.

According to assistant coach Roger Reid, Cougar coaches have been watching the would-be recruits in both regular season and tournament play throughout the past year.

Once the coaches have an idea of what the players' abilities are, they ask the players if they may be invited to make a "home visit" where prospective team members are given information about BYU and its athletic program.

The next step in the process is the campus visit phase. Each player is allowed to visit the six schools he is most interested in.

Although the commitments made to this point are verbal ones, which will not become official until players sign "letters of intent" on Wednesday, the following players are expected to sign letters to play for BYU next season:

Chris Nikevich, 6-foot-2 guard from Crespi High School in Encino, Calif., named first team 4-A Division CIF in Southern California.

Bret Applegate, 6-foot-7 forward from Snow College, named National Junior College All-American and ICAAC Most Valuable Player, averaged 29 points and 14 rebounds per game.

Alan Pollard, 6-foot-9 forward from Mountain View High School, voted Most Valuable Player in the Utah 3-A State Championship.

Brian Taylor, 6-foot-4 guard from Davis High in Kaysville, Utah.

S.L. Eagles down Stars

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Salt Lake City's Bobby Crawford broke a 3-3 tie with a goal 36 seconds into the second period as the Eagles defeated the Oklahoma City Stars 5-3 in Central Hockey League playoff action Sunday.

The win gave the Eagles a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five playoff series with the Stars. The fourth game will be in Oklahoma City tonight.

Doug Palazzari scored two goals for Salt Lake City, including one in the first period that allowed the Eagles to take a 3-1 lead.

Stadler playing golf with new confidence

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus may have summed it up best.

Nicklaus had just put together a fast finish to get back in contention in the third round of the Masters. His pleasure was short-lived, however.

Playing behind him, Craig Stadler birdied the last three holes. The scoring burst gave him a 3-shot lead over the field, six over Nicklaus.

"Well," said Jack, "it seems as if his time has come."

It has.

His playoff victory the following day provided this 28-year-old man with his first major triumph and confirmed his position among the very top rank of the men now playing the game.

His money-winnings increase every year.

He broke through to his first victory in 1980. And the title and money began to come with something approaching regularity. During the last 2½ seasons he's won six times and collected more than $600,000.

Streaking Cats ready to meet Thunderbirds

The BYU baseball team will sponsor Southern Utah State College today and Wednesday in a four-game series at Cougar field.

The Cats are No. 1 in the Western Athletic Conference Northern Division and posted an 8-0 WAC record after last weekend's three-game blowout of Wyoming.

Since SUSC is not in the WAC, the game is not counted in conference play, but will serve to get the Cougars ready for their series against Air Force Academy beginning Friday.

Pitching for the Cougars in today's double-header games will be Joe Whitmer (5-1) and Steve Nielsen (2-0).

In Wednesday's double-header, BYU coach Gary

Pullins will have Rick Aguilera (0-3) on the mound for the Cougars in the first game and Kevin Towers (0-4) for the second.

Pullins calls Aguilera and Towers his "hard luck pitchers," but said neither of them gave up runs when they pitched. Pullins is looking forward to them continuing the Cougars' eight-game winning streak.

He said SUSC is "a very good NAIA team," and is better than Wyoming.

"SUSC is a WAC-quality ball club," Pullins said.

The Thunderbirds are 15-7 on the season.

BYU played Southern Utah State earlier in the season and claimed three of four games of two double-headers.

Lacrosse team beats Aggies

The BYU lacrosse team downed Utah State this past weekend 11-4 in Provo.

Eric Vogelsburg led the scoring attack for BYU with four goals and three assists. Dave Heath and Mark Stout each scored two goals for the Cougars and Charlie Nye, Bert Bunker and Dan McAfferty had one goal each for BYU.

Goalie Pat Connolly had a season-high 13 saves for the Cougars. In spite of the fact that Connolly suffered a knee injury in the second quarter of Saturday's game, he played the remaining two-and-one-half quarters and went on to have his best game of the season.

According to BYU coach Bruce Call, Connolly was taken to the hospital after Saturday's game where doctors discovered he suffered "significant ligament damage," and as a result will most likely be unable to play the remainder of the season.

Actor's daughter injured in crash

LANCASTER, Calif. (AP)—Actor-singer Kris Kristofferson canceled a European tour and returned to the United States after his daughter was badly hurt in an accident that slightly injured Olympic skater Eric Heiden.

Tracy Kristofferson, 20, suffered internal and head injuries in the motorcycle accident Friday night. She was in serious condition but improving Monday, said Frankie Richards, a spokeswoman for Antelope Valley Hospital Medical Center here.

Heiden, who won five gold medals in speed skating at the 1980 Winter Olympics, was driving a motorcycle with Kristofferson's daughter as his passenger when he braked to avoid a dog, said Highway Patrol Officer Larry Duncan. The motorcycle was hit from behind by a camper that Heiden had just passed at a high speed, Duncan said.

John Ford Coley, formerly of "England Dan and John Ford Coley," along with the sister duo, Leslie and Kelly, will perform Saturday in the ELWC. The concert is being sponsored by ASBYU to help students "get ready for finals week."

Coley and sister team present 'finals' concert

The ASBYU Social Office is sponsoring a "get ready for finals concert" Saturday at 8 p.m. The concert will feature John Ford Coley, formerly of England Dan and John Ford Coley, in a new group called Leslie, Kelly and John Ford Coley.

Leslie and Kelly, a sister singer-songwriter duo, have known Coley since before his debut with England Dan. After a decade of friendship, they have decided to combine their professional careers.

Coley began his musical training by playing classical piano; he then took up the guitar. While attending high school in Texas, he played in a series of local bands.

The most notable of these bands, Southwest F.O.B., had a regional hit that broke the Top Fifty nationally. Coley then moved to California, where Herb Alpert's interest soon landed him a record contract.

He enjoyed considerable success in the years to follow with national hits like "I'd Really Love to See You Tonight," "Nights Are Forever," "We'll Never Have to Say Good-bye Again," and "Love Is the Answer."

Soon after "The Best of" album, England Dan and John Ford Coley decided to pursue separate musical careers. Coley formerly produced the duo Leslie and Kelly, and at this time decided to add his own vocal talents.

Leslie and Kelly grew up in a musical family. Their father, Sid Bulkin, played drums in the big band era and was acknowledged as one of the 10 best drummers in the country.

Their mother, Joan Nemour, was a professional actress and choreographer and presently is in charge of a musical publishing firm. This provided an environment of professionalism and musical variety that is still a part of Leslie and Kelly's everyday lives.

Although Leslie and Kelly look alike, there are two years age difference between the two singers. Along with Coley, they work together continuously, exchanging ideas that develop the emerging Leslie, Kelly and John Ford Coley style.

Aside from music, the two sisters share many other activities, including jogging, karate and racquetball. They both share a common belief in the Bahai faith and enjoy meeting people from different backgrounds. "The humanitarian aspects of our careers are very important to us," they agree, "and that our music is hopeful and positive."

Their debut album, titled Leslie, Kelly and John Ford Coley, is an expression of their new sound.

The trio said their music's main purpose is to offer good songs and good singing.

The ASBYU Social Office will be subsidizing the concert, which will be in the ELWC Ballroom. Tickets are $4 and are on sale in the business office on the third floor of the ELWC.

Choice for land causes reservations

THE CITY (AP) — History hasn't been kind to the Paiute. Three centuries ago, an estimated 10,000 Paiute lived in the area around what is now Provo. They hunted, fished and harvested wild plants. They lived in small, round, brush-covered homes. They were nomads, moving from place to place as the seasons changed.

Public lands administered by the Forest Service, are even more crucial to the tribe, Benioh said. The tribe is pinning its economic future on the coal-mining potential of a 9,520-acre parcel in the Manti-La Sal National Forest.

The final 430 acres in south central Utah's Fish-lake National Forest is dotted with Paiute burial grounds.

However, legislation approving creation of a Paiute reservation, co-sponsored by Sen. Orrin Hatch and Rep. Dan Marriott of Utah, does not apply to national forests, some official say.

End of bumpy rides in sight as repairs begin on 900 East

Road repairs on the 900 East Project in Provo are scheduled to begin as soon as Thursday, depending on when the hot-mix plants open, said Jack Zirbes, Provo City engineer.

According to Zirbes, the repairs should not take more than a couple of days unless extended storm periods cause further delay.

The project for widening 900 East, from about 800 North to South State Street, will begin in early spring 1983, said Zirbes. "We have received notification that $1.2 million has been allotted to Provo from the Federal Urban Roads Funds to complete the project.

"This project should take most of the summer and possibly part of the fall to complete," said Zirbes. Advertising for bids on the construction will begin in late December, he said.

Provo is working with the Utah Department of Transportation to complete the engineering and to have the project completed by the fall of 1983, Zirbes said.

Genealogy library gets half of 1900 census

The first half of a federal census index for the year 1900 is now available to all genealogical workers, said Pam Walker, secretary for the Utah Valley Branch Genealogical Library.

The second half of the index should be coming at any time, she said. The index now covers the states listed alphabetically up to Massachusetts.

The Temple Index Bureau, an index of temple endowments and baptism dates, is also planned to be acquired later in April, said Walker.

The census is in an index by state of all people living in 1900. "It tells where people were living, who they lived with, where they were born, where their parents were born and what their occupation was," Walker said.

Walker said the TIB is restricted for the use of temple recommend holders or those people with letters from their bishops asking for permission to use the material.

"The 1900 census is valuable because of a privacy act that took effect in 1910, which kept the census material confidential," said Walker. To get the same information from later censuses, a person has to write to Washington, D.C. Requests can be made on only one person at a time. The person requesting the information must be a descendant. There is also a charge for the information.

Walker said the 1890 federal census was burned in a fire.

Student ranked 7th in nation

By MELANIE MOWRER
Staff Writer

Table tennis is not just a fun game to Quang Bui, a BYU student who is a member of the U.S. Table Tennis Team. It is a serious and demanding sport.

Bui, 18, a freshman from Bellevue, Wash., with an undecided major, is ranked seventh in the nation. Originally from Vietnam, Bui said his father started him playing table tennis at the age of nine when he was "barely tall enough to see over the table."

At 14, Bui played on the U.S. junior men's team, and then two years later he became a member of the men's team.

Because of extensive traveling to play in table-tennis tournaments, Bui sometimes misses classes and gets behind in his studies. Last year he averaged about two tournaments a month, Bui said. Tournaments take him to foreign countries like Japan, Nicaragua and Cuba.

In the Cuba Invitational Tournament last week, Bui said, he won his first gold medal since joining the U.S. team.

Bui said he tries to practice at least three hours a day. He would like to practice more but classes and schoolwork take up much of his time. Because the tables in the Richards Building are usually occupied by classes, Bui said, he practices in the gameroom in the Wilkinson Center.

"Next year I plan to reserve time in the Richards Building for practice," Bui said. To help with his practicing, Bui has a table-tennis robot that shoots balls across the table. It is geared to throw different kinds of shots and spins at the player.

Bui said his strength as a table-tennis player is his strategy on offense. If Bui can get his opponent to play defensively, it gives him the advantage in a game. "All top table-tennis players play offensively," Bui said. His favorite shots are a "top spin, or loop drive, and a smash hit."

Even though Bui does not have a world ranking yet, he is "on his way there," he said. Two years ago at the U.S. Team Open Championship, Bui defeated Yugoslavia's Zoran Kusanovic, then the eighth-ranked table-tennis player in the world. It was one of the "biggest upsets" on the table-tennis circuit, Bui said.

Table tennis is becoming a recognized sport in the world, Bui said. It was included for the first time in the recent Pan-American games. Table tennis will also be included in the 1988 Olympics in Seoul, South Korea, he said.

Because the U.S. team members must try out for the team every year, Bui said his goals include making the U.S. team each year. He also would like to do well in the World Championships in Japan in 1983.

Y pays peak bill regardless of use

BYU is charged for the peak amount of electricity used on campus whether it constantly functions at peak levels. BYU power use frequently falls below the highest reading recorded, said William Stacey, supervising engineer of utilities for the physical plant.

Energy use is recorded in the electric shop in the Brewster Building, said Stacey. "Provo City measures the instantaneous electric use or the demand power at 15-minute intervals," said Stacey. The city charges BYU for the highest recorded amount each month. Stacey said the utility company's explanation for charging the peak amount is because they have to build facilities to provide the peak-demand power.

Weather may cause landscape problems

Rainy weather has caused problems in preparing for the dedication of the Harman Building, said Roy Peterman, physical plant grounds supervisor.

According to Peterman, workers are planting in the mud. "Planting in the mud compacts the soil so water won't seep through it," he said. "We may have to tear up some plants after the dedication and redo it."

Peterman said the grounds crews have been delayed in working on the BYU track, which is supposed to be finished for the NCAA track meet June 1 and 2.

Desolation blamed on waste

NEW YORK (AP) — Western belief that a nuclear dump explosion created a "vast barren wasteland" near the Ural Mountains has been challenged by a new study that blames the contamination on decades of careless Soviet air and water pollution.

For years, the "Kyshtyn disaster" in the winter of 1957-58 has been referred to in the West as the worst nuclear accident ever. Dissident Soviet scientists claim the blast left hundreds dead from radiation and leveled as much as 1,000 square miles of land.

But a Los Alamos National Laboratory team, using classified CIA and military documents, now contends that there was no nuclear explosion, that the Soviet government caused the contamination by "carelessness and blatant disregard for their people or their surroundings."

The researchers said that the explosion theory needed to be "examined impartially" because Kyshtyn was "no longer merely an intriguing enigma; the allegations surrounding it bear heavily on the whole question of nuclear waste disposal in the United States."

The Soviet government has never commented on Kyshtyn.

The report said that contamination east of the city of Kyshtyn in the southern Ural is due chiefly to many years of discharging polluted water from nuclear reactors and chronic "acid rain" produced by a mix of high humidity and nitrogen oxide emissions from a plutonium enrichment plant, which would explain reports of dead trees and grass.

If the Soviets, in the rush to produce plutonium, did not adequately cool irradiated fuel elements, "the off gases would also contain appreciable amounts of radioactive iodine," the researchers added.

Improper ground disposal of radioactive liquid wastes was cited as another possible cause of contamination. Researchers did not rule out the possibility that a chemical explosion eventually occurred from the compacted stores of ammonium nitrate and hexone, a flammable solvent, among clay particles at the dried-out bottom of an artificial lake used to store nuclear wastes.

The three-year Department of Energy study concludes that while the contaminated area does exist it is far smaller than originally claimed.

The sources and documentation for the Los Alamos findings were not revealed because they are classified as secret, according to laboratory spokesman Jim Breen.

Commentary

Change image and a lot more

An excellent place to live, with numerous activities, an environment that promotes study and time-saving advantages — that's the new image the BYU Housing Office wants to create for on-campus housing.

But more than the image needs to be changed if on-campus housing is to attract and hold renters. Strict check-out requirements (which in Heritage Halls include everything from washing the shower curtain and scrubbing the baseboards to cleaning out cracks in bedroom drawers) during finals week are not likely to be attractive to busy students.

When the floor is stripped and waxed, the refrigerator cleaned and empty, the shelves dusted, the rug vacuumed, the stove gleaming and the bathtub scrubbed spotless in accordance with stringent regulations, it's hard to live.

Tip-toeing around in socks, eating fast food that doesn't require cooking, having no place to put your books and being hesitant to take a bath for a week do not promote comfort, ease or concentration for students who are trying to study for finals.

Lamin Oviatt, assistant director of housing, says steps are being taken to correct these problems. For instance, no-wax linoleum is to be installed in seven to 10 Heritage Halls buildings this year, and the office is "taking a very serious look" at the other requirements, he said.

If the housing office really wants to improve its image, this "serious look" will result in serious action.

It's true on-campus housing is well run and the buildings are in good condition because of the strict requirements. But if the housing office seeks renters, it must do more than talk about its dormitories being good places to live — they must actually BE good places to live.

If on-campus housing is to get a new image, the housing office must be as good as its word.

Before the image can be changed, the requirements must be revised. Let's hope the Housing Office is as good as its word.

No time to waste

When Utah Supreme Court Justice Dallin Oaks returned to BYU to speak at a Devotional Assembly last September, he related an experience that occurred a few months after he began his service as president of BYU.

The outcome of that experience may be very beneficial to the students of BYU. While pondering a particular problem, then President Oaks found himself unable to think of the problem at hand. Instead, another pending issue kept thrusting itself into his mind: should BYU's academic calendar be modified to complete the Fall Semester before Christmas?

After 10 or 15 minutes of effort, trying to exclude the thoughts from his mind, Oaks realized the Spirit was trying to communicate with him, and immediately turned his full attention to that question and began recording his thoughts on a piece of paper.

Within a few minutes I had recorded the details of a three-semester calendar, with all of its powerful advantages," he related, in the devotional address.

Because of this divinely inspired three-semester academic calendar, April graduates of BYU and students leaving for the summer can enter the job market a full month ahead of students graduating from many other academic institutions.

This does, of course, require advanced planning and the setting of priorities.

But if procrastination is your bag, and you don't know where you are going or what you will be doing after April graduation, you can still be a full month ahead of the procrastinators at other universities if you take advantage of the calendar and start the job hunt now.

Waiting for graduation before beginning the job hunt is foolishness, and with the tightening of the economic pinch in this nation, there is no time to dilly dally.

THE 1982 GRADUATE

Success needs priorities

President Kimball, in his conference address, told the Saints that "all is well" in spite of today's economic and political conditions. At the Welfare Session, other general authorities suggested that members of the Church can weather hard times by ordering their priorities and carefully using their resources. This advice is especially applicable to the job market.

In the next few weeks, thousands of students will begin the annual search for summer and full-time employment. A recent Universe article pointed out that, while many categories of jobs are saturated, there is still a shortage of specialized workers this decade. As a matter of fact, in the 1980-81 school year, 99 percent of the engineering majors were employed in their field. According to a recent article in the Christian Science Monitor, good technicians are always in demand. Clearly, then, students must order their priorities when preparing for and searching out careers.

An article in the Universe pointed out that a student in European literature was selling vacuum cleaners because there was no demand for his specialty. This does not mean that the field of literature, the arts, social science, or education are not valuable in our society — on the contrary, they are extremely important. Certain individuals will succeed in those fields in spite of crowded markets. But perhaps it is time for the serious student to look at his whole life situation rather than just the college experience. Can he afford to wait for a job in a crowded field or will he need to provide for himself as soon as graduation is completed? Is he willing to take a position for thousands less and enjoy his college field as a part-time job or as a hobby only? Will his family wait? Will creditors accept less than full payments? All these things must be considered.

There is, as pointed out, an answer to the times and the questions above. Perhaps a crowded major field could find time for a minor or a double major in a less crowded area. Perhaps the first choice of major could become a second choice, a minor field. These are of course only suggestions — the job market changes continually. What is "in" today is full tomorrow. The answer is to do as the general authorities suggest: take stock of what we have, order priorities, do the best we can, and have faith in the Lord and in the words of the prophet that indeed if we do our part all will be well.

—Mike Clay

Be nice; they're graduating

Did you ever notice how some students seem to become extremely edgy about this time of year? You see them sitting in the library with worried looks on their faces, as if they are about to mount the gallows. Others are just walking around campus with dazed expressions. You may feel inclined to ask them if they need help, but something about them warns you off. Still others seem to be hyperactive; they can never seem to get enough accomplished in a 24-hour day.

All these symptoms and probably many more you have noticed are the result of "graduation fever." This is a sickness that occurs late in the life of a college student. It seems to reach the acute stages around the end of March and beginning of April.

As the disease progresses, it characteristically affects wives and friends, too. Several cases of neglect have been reported.

Unfortunately the only cure for the disease is a diploma, and the only medication to treat the symptoms is a statement from teachers, such as "Don't worry; even if you flunk the final, you'll still pass the class." And this medication has not been approved by the FDA.

So if you see or know of someone afflicted with graduation fever, show a little compassion for him. You will probably suffer from this strange disease yourself some day.

Country stands to benefit when ERA time limit ends

June 30 could be a date of deliverance. By then, the United States will have decided whether the Equal Rights Amendment should be a permanent part of the nation's Constitution. And a pleasant consequence ought to be freedom from the tyranny of ERA rhetoric.

Support or opposition in the ERA debate has become a convenient, arbitrary measurement of one's belief in equality. Whether for connected or entirely extraneous reasons, groups and individuals use the ERA campaign as a club with which to beat on other groups or people who aren't ERA admirers. It wasn't an unusual development, but a reprehensible one nonetheless.

Subtle distinctions are not handy in forming a large public following. And since ERA required popular advocacy if the required number of states were to ratify it, the issue became simplified. Did you embrace the notion of equality? Then you were for ERA. Were you anti-equality? Obviously that's why you were against ERA. The test is inaccurate and corruptive.

It is possible to be an avid, active disciple of equality in all forms and still discount the value of ERA. Honorable doubts exist about who really benefits, and to what extent, with ERA passage. But to raise those questions is to risk being branded a foe of equality by rapid ERA backers.

Proposals to change law, revise public policy, certainly amend the United States Constitution, frequently prompt objection as well as support. A thorough analysis and debate are supposed to be healthy for a system which claims it thrives on open, frank and honest discussion. Except some of these issues can bring out the worst characteristics in argumentation. ERA has been one of those.

Did a state's legislature, in public assembly, choose not to approve ERA? Well, then it must be subject to boycotts and other threats to its economic well-being. Did an organization, such as The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, decide the ERA was wrong for the country? Then it must be bothered with insulting demonstrations when its members gather for religious and other church-related services.

Is this really in the tradition of democratic discussion and decision? Or does it have more to do with mob-like extortion and harassment?

The impetus behind ERA, the purposes for the amendment are respectable and understandable. Large numbers of American women are entitled to feel their opportunities could be improved with a constitutional amendment. Congress agreed, first forwarding such an amendment to the states, then extending the time during which it could gain sufficient state approval.

But, in common fairness, others are entitled to another view, the belief that ERA is oversold. Among those are apt to be considerable number who consider themselves as fervent advocates of equality as anyone espousing ERA. In a country with another constitutional amendment guaranteeing free speech, a difference of opinion shouldn't earn one side or the other insults, picketing or threats of economic retribution.

Securing, preserving equality for all United States citizens should continue as one of this country's fundamental interests. The struggle over ERA has, regrettably if naturally, distorted that task. When the period for ratification ends that ought to be the time for restoring more balance and civility to the effort.

Canine nonsense

Editor:

The photograph on page 12 of The Daily Universe, April 2, was in excellent taste. The idea that a dog expresses affection by oscillation is behavioral nonsense. While it may be laudable to love a dog, to kiss him is not entirely innocuous.

Having kissed a dog, one has at best embarked upon the oral exchange of canine anal debris, which at its indelicate best is designed to disseminate those worms who've found home in more dogs' bowels than you can shake a tail at. Tapeworms, ascarides and dog hookworms belong, if anywhere, in their natural hosts — not man.

Of course your pet doesn't have worms; after all, you've never seen any. But then, there are more exotic ways to play canine roulette. We share diphtheria, tuberculosis, histoplasmosis, and many other diseases in common with man's best friend.

The purpose of the article was perhaps noble, the presentation reprehensible. If you care not for yourself, please regard the welfare of the poor beast.

Annoying flaws

Editor:

I have been consistently disappointed by a subtle but annoying flaw in certain articles that appear in The Universe. Many articles that deal with events that will soon occur, neglect certain very important facts. An example will suffice: In Friday's issue, April 2, the upcoming baseball games were discussed. Nothing was said about the time or place. On Saturday I went, hoping that I might find a ball game in progress on Cougar Field. However, I was quite disappointed. On Monday I found that the games had been played in Colorado Springs. Such omissions are intolerable in quality publications. Also, attendance at such events would be greatly stimulated by accurate scheduling information.

almost extinct typewriters at BYU. It must be the best kept secret on campus as to where they hide the typewriters. It seems to us most teachers require their work to be typewritten. How can you expect us to accomplish this task without sufficient typewriters? Is BYU indifferent or ashamed of its typewriters and will not inform students as to where they are, or is it that they are embarrassed by the shape the typewriters are in?

After finally finding the typewriters that were so well hidden, I found a line of people before me that made me want to scream. Out of 10 typewriters in the room, only seven were barely functional. I waited hours before I finally was able to start plunking out my paper. How hard would it be to schedule all the typing classes before noon and leave the rooms open for all the student to use the typewriters. Some type of arrangement could be made without much hardship on anyone.

A Catsup caper

Editor:

Late one Tuesday night, I exited the law building intending to make my usual, uneventful drive home. As I approached my car, I discovered that someone had squirted catsup all over the left door and window. You can imagine my delight. I immediately asked myself why anyone would do this, and eventually theorized that the color of the catsup and the fact I have four University of Utah parking stickers remaining on the window from my undergraduate days might be interrelated. Perhaps there was a moron or group of morons who wanted to make me feel unwelcome, and conclude that I should be informed. Mere speculation about people's motives are obviously not helpful and probably doesn't warrant serious attention. I just want to inform whoever did this that they only succeeded in accomplishing two things: making me angry and aggravating my runny nose by making it

Cheapness isn't equal to prudence it's cheap

At a recent ward activity, the actress, singer sang. "It would be nice date, but all the guys are kates. . . . Now it's hard assume all guys are cheap for that matter, that the pleasurable only to guys. But sure, while almost everyone appreciates being on a tight one like a cheap skate. . . .

You know the type, he asks, "Who's paying?" or "treating?" And if he should meet of rare generosity, then an ice cream cone he never forget it.

The cheap skate is right in the Little Red Hen story. He more than willing to accept seek out, dinner invitation never offers to bring anything the first dinner in rural he's the only one to dig in "everyone" ordered, but then "to chip in" when it comes the bill.

A lot of people are low on the cheap skate never has. You know because he frequently complains about it and is always money from his room the old line, "I'll glad Tuesday."

The cheap skate rarely takes his car on group outings. "I'm almost out of wouldn't think of offering. If he refuses, but, if he'll break down and bring "generic" cookies.

His year's supply of individual packets, the kitchen foot restaurants. He or so every time he gets small fries. And of course inflation has upped the price a waitress for a tip, never leaves one anyway matter to him what the girl.

The list goes on, but he said. "The cheap one is the one who says 'I'm in the restroom. If the check ahead and pay it.'"
